Fiscal court meeting ends on sour note

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

The Estill Count fiscal court meeting ended uncharacteristically Monday night after Judge-Executive Wallace Taylor exited the meeting abruptly.

Following the courts quick run through the agenda, Darrell Johnson, Magistrate for District 3, made a motion during the "other considerations" section of the meeting to "wipe Mr. Horn's slate completely clean."

No explanation was given at the time as to why Horn's slate needed to be wiped clean.

Taylor said he was hurting from a fall he'd taken recently, and he was leaving. He made a motion to adjourn the meeting. He left the meeting room, but stepped back in the room briefly to toss a thick manual of "administrative code and personnel policy" on the table.

After Taylor exited the meeting, Magistrates Johnson and Young voted "yes" to absolving Mr. Horn of whatever wrongdoing he had been accused of.

In a later interview, Taylor said he sent Horn home for three days without pay for making a disrespectful hand gesture toward him while Horn was on his job as the supervisor at the recycling center. Taylor said another employee, whom Horn supervises, was the only other person present.

Taylor said the magistrates did not handle the personnel issue according to the guidelines in the policy manual.

In other business, discussion of the agenda prior to that episode was brief. Taylor said the price offered in the reverse salt auction by Detroit Salt is $99.50 a ton, compared to the $68 a ton paid for salt in last year's auction.

The judge said that was better than the price of salt back in the winter "when we needed it, but it's still high." He said 1000 tons is available to them at that price, but their storage facility will hold about 275 tons.

Taylor also said that no bids had come in the mail yet for blacktop, but a bid from Hinkle is anticipated to be less than the state price.

Fred Rogers, Estill County's Emergency Management Director, said FEMA wants some of the cell towers in the county upgraded according to new federal specifications. He said he wasn't sure how much it would cost, but the state would be paying for it.

Taylor said, "I think we need to bid it." He questioned why recently built towers needed upgrading, and then called for a motion to advertise for bids for additional grounding at the towers. A motion was made and Johnson and Young voted yes.

Estill County students will again eat free

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

Estill County students will again receive free breakfasts and lunches next school year, said Randall Christopher, Assistant Superintendent, in Tuesday's Board of Education meeting.

He said the school district is "set up for next year," so that all Estill County students, regardless of income, will be eligible for basic lunch and breakfast at no cost.

Christopher said new dietary guidelines from the federal government continue to be implemented, which he described as "very stringent." The guidelines cut the amount of sugar, salt and fat from meals served by the school, while increasing servings of fruits and vegetables.

Although there has been some resistance of the new dietary guidelines from students and staff, Christopher said that 82 to 85 percent of students eat at school. He said that number was in the 70's not long ago.

In other business, the School Facilities Construction Commission made an offer of assistance for a technology grant, which the school board accepted, but the district is required to match.

Superintendent Bert Hensley said the General Assembly (in the Budget of the Commonwealth) approved a 98 cent assessment fee for every employee to be added to the cost of their Health and Life Insurance.

Hensley also announced a Teacher Leadership Program designed to recruit teachers into administrative positions.

MAP Spring 14 test results were published at the meeting. MAP testing is for grades K-8.

In math, test scores improved from the fall of 2013 in every grade level. Reading scores

KSP Warns of Leaving Children in Hot Cars

Editor's Note: Photo on front page courtesy of General Motors. Depicts the temperature change within a vehicle (in ten minute time) when outside temperature is 80 degrees.

(FRANKFORT, Ky.) - The Kentucky State Police remind parents not to leave a child alone in a hot car as temperatures in the Bluegrass are on the rise. It may seem like common sense, but every year law enforcement agencies answer calls about unattended children in vehicles. The National Safety Council (NSC) reports that nine children have already died in 2014 from being left in hot cars across the U.S.

An ongoing study by San Francisco State University estimates that since 1998, there have been 615 heatstroke deaths of children left in vehicles, an average of 38 deaths per year. Most of those deaths were children under the age of two-years.

.In 2000, Kentucky passed "Bryan's Law," which makes a person liable for second-degree manslaughter or first-degree wanton endangerment for leaving a child younger than eight years of age in a motor vehicle where circumstances pose a grave risk of death. The law was named after 11-month old Bryan Puckett, who died July 13, 1999 after being left in a hot car by his babysitter.

KSP spokesman Sgt. Michael Webb says most people know the dangers of leaving a child in a hot car, but each year these senseless tragedies continue to occur.

"A child's body heats up three to five times faster than that of an adult," says Webb. "The temperature inside a car can rise 19 degrees in 10 minutes. Together, this can be deadly in a very short period of time."

Kentucky's last reported death from a child being left in a car was during 2012 in Louisville. The NSC reports that 44 children died last year from vehicular heatstroke in the U.S.

Webb offers the following safety tips:

* Never leave a child in an unattended car, even with the windows down.

* Be sure that all occupants leave the vehicle when unloading. Don't overlook sleeping babies.

* Always lock your car. If a child is missing, check the car first, including the trunk. Teach your children that vehicles are never to be used as a play area.

* Keep a stuffed animal in the car seat and when the child is put in the seat place the animal in the front with the driver as a reminder.

* Place your purse or briefcase in the back seat as a reminder that you have your child in the car.

* Make 'look before you leave' a routine whenever you get out of the car.

Webb says while a person will face criminal charges for leaving a child in a car, the pain and guilt from making such a mistake will last far longer.

KSP asks citizens to keep an eye out for children left in vehicles on hot days and to call 911 if they think the occupant is in danger.

Tip leads to arrest of woman for cultivating marijuana

A woman from Dry Branch was arrested after an anonymous tip to state police.

Kentucky State Trooper T Robinson received a tip that Judy Shekeithe Abner, 46, of 1140 Dry Branch, was cultivating marijuana at her residence.

According to the police report, Troopers Zach Pennington and Robinson arrived at the above residence on June 6. While inside the residence, Ms. Abner voluntarily admitted to having marijuana in her bedroom.

After the troopers took a look around outside, they also found two marijuana plants in a flower pot close to the home.

When asked to whom it belonged, Abner responded, "That is a marijuana plant, and it is mine."

When Abner was asked why she said the marijuana in her bedroom was all she had, she allegedly said, "I had to try to lie, hoping you wouldn't find it."

After further search of her residence and the area around it, Troopers Robinson and Pennington found more than five marijuana plants in flower pots, which is a class D felony.

Abner was charged with cultivating marijuana, five plants or more, first offense, and possession of marijuana.

Her bond was set at $2,500 cash. Abner was released on her own recognizance after the bail was paid.

What our country needs from the press

By LEE HAMILTON
CV&T Guest Columnist

These days, the scandal involving long wait times at VA hospitals can feel like some made-in-Washington spectacle generated by politicians looking for headlines. But it isn't. It had its genesis in a late-April report on CNN that as many as 40 veterans may have died waiting for appointments at VA hospitals in Phoenix.

This investigative piece was notable for two reasons. It's been a while since a news story so quickly provoked such a storm of public indignation that a cabinet secretary, deservedly or not, had no choice but to resign. And it's a reminder of just how important old-fashioned shoe-leather reporting remains to our system of government, especially when it uncovers official misdoing.

One of the basic truths about our representative democracy is that it does not work without solid information. Public officials, both elected and appointed, need to know what's happening in the communities they serve, and the people who live in those communities need to know what the government they elect and fund is doing in their name.

A lot of forces try to distort that flow of information, or even block it altogether from officials who aren't living up to our expectations to politicians counting on public ignorance to lobbyists and advocates hoping to sway public opinion. This is why the press , and by this I mean print, broadcast and online journalists, is so crucial to our country's health. It is, or ought to be, a steady, dispassionate, truth-seeking, skeptical and tough-minded force for public understanding.

In an ideal world, our media would focus on the serious side of the news. It would explore and highlight the substance of issues, not simply the politics of issues. It would detail the facts underlying a story, rather than dwelling on the personalities at play in the story. There is a place for entertainment that plays off the news, as people like Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert have amply demonstrated, but in their search for an audience, news executives shouldn't let it become a substitute for dogged reporting and the traditional values of accuracy, truth and fairness.

These are not easy times for journalists, however. I don't pretend to understand all the forces that are reshaping what we see, hear and read in the news media, and I know that news executives are struggling with a host of formidable economic and social challenges. Yet if the line between news and entertainment gets blurred, if loud opinion replaces accurate reporting, and if journalists take the easy road of covering politics and the horse race rather than the core of policy-making, substance, consensus-building, and the painstaking search for remedy, then representative democracy is in trouble.

New organizations and websites are trying to make up some of the ground that's been lost in the years of news-industry turmoil: investigative outfits like ProPublica and the new wave of "explanatory" and data-driven sites like Vox and 538.com. But their very presence suggests that they see a void to be filled. These days, only a handful of news organizations in the country have the resources, both human and financial, to spend weeks or months chasing an investigation. Given the cuts that have stripped newsrooms of the expertise they once contained, I sometimes wonder whether the kind of reporting that brought us Watergate and uncovered the Enron scandal could still occur.

Because make no mistake: we need maximum oversight. You and I need it if we're to be certain that misdeeds cannot hide in the darker corners of government. And Congress needs it if it's to carry out one of its core responsibilities: overseeing the operations of government. All of us rely on the press to check abuses of power, see that laws are properly implemented, hold officials accountable, and tell those officials when their policies and operations are failing or going astray. Without a strong independent press, those in power could simply tell us what they want us to know and we'd be none the wiser. And that is no state of affairs for a democracy.

Father's Day, a reminder to spend time with your children

By GLENN MOLLETTE
CV&T Guest Columnist

I wish I had been a better father. I wonder if anybody else has felt this way?

It seems like yesterday that my two beautiful sons Jared and Zachary were only small children. What happened to those days when we played in the yard, swam, or just spent time together? The days of telling silly nighttime stories, tucking them in bed and just hanging out flew by faster than a breath of air on a frosty day. If I could reach back and pull a few of those days back to the present I would stop the clock and savor every moment of those beautiful childhood years.

I've heard that fathers on their deathbeds do not wish they had spent more time at the office. Most fathers do regret not spending more time with their families.

We get preoccupied as dads. I've heard great spiritual leaders like Billy Graham and Charles Stanley talk about being totally preoccupied and consumed with their speaking, writing and vocational interests to the point that they knew they had neglected their families.

It's not easy being a dad. We know we have to bring payroll into the house, keep a roof over the family and try to keep the family fed. In and around those daily duties there are the desires to give to your children. We want them to do well in school and enjoy music and sports. Dads want to provide vacations, an occasional fun weekend, and comforts to the family. Often the stresses of work, personal goals and life's problems make dad's life a juggling act.

Most every dad feels the pride of fatherhood. I was right "there" when both of my sons were born. I leaped for joy on both of those occasions. I have leaped many times since. My two sons are now in the military. My oldest has served almost eleven years and my youngest is starting his fourth year. I am very proud of them both. While I can't go back and try to be all that I wish I had been for my kids I can keep trying today. I never miss a chance to hug and kiss them and tell them how much I love them. More than ever I want to spend quality time with them but now the time is relegated to a few days a year.

In the remaining years of my fatherhood I want them to know I am on their side. I am their father regardless of what comes their way. I am here to help if I possibly can but will always encourage their independence and personal goal setting. I want them to be happy and fulfilled. I know time is passing.

My dad passed on several years ago. He lived to be eighty-five. However, life was quick and the time we had together seems like a vapor, here for a moment and then gone.

Dads, today, before the vapor of life is gone, do the most important thing that you can do for your children - spend time with them.

Delaying Social Security could increase lifetime income

By Tim Marema and Roberto Gallardo, from The Daily Yonder

Estill County residents who are nearing retirement age can increase their lifetime income if they can wait a bit to start drawing Social Security benefits.

In Estill County 1,991 residents – or 13.7 percent of the population – are aged 55 to 64. Those are the years when folks start thinking seriously about retirement.

Workers can start taking Social Security at age 62. But for those who can wait, the benefits go up.

"If you need Social Security early, take it – you've earned it," said Virginia Reno with the National Academy of Social Insurance, a nonprofit organization based in Washington, D.C. "But waiting even a year or two can make a big difference in the long run. The extra benefits are there for life."

Payments increase by 5 to 7 percent for each year of delay between ages 62 and 66, and by 8 percent for each year of delay between ages 66 and 70. The increases stop at age 70.

For someone who can wait until age 70 to take Social Security, the reward is a lifetime monthly benefit that is 76 percent higher than if taken at age 62.

For example, a worker who qualifies for a Social Security benefit of $750 at age 62 would receive $1,000 by waiting until full retirement age (66 for people born in 1943 to 1954). By waiting until age 70, the retiree would receive $1,320 a month.

The higher benefit would also be the basis for future inflation adjustments.

Around Kentucky, only about one in four residents who are currently receiving Social Security retirement benefits waited until full retirement age to start their payments, according to the Social Security Administration.

In Estill County, 1,935 residents received retirement benefits from the federal system, according to 2012 figures.

The average recipient of Social Security retirement benefits in Estill County received $1,006 a month in December of that year. On an annual basis, that brought $23,364,000 in income to the area – 6.4 percent of all personal income in the county, according to the Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Getting the most out of Social Security benefits becomes more important the longer retirees live, said Leticia Miranda, a policy adviser with the National Council of La Raza, a nonprofit that focuses on Hispanic issues, including retirement.

"You may be here longer than you think," Miranda said.

About half of seniors aged 65 to 69 get most of their income from Social Security. Many have other assets or work part time. But for three out of four seniors in their 80s, Social Security is the main source of income.

Nationally, a woman who is 65 years old today can expect to live until she is 86. For men, it's 84 years.

Another consideration is how the timing of benefits will affect a spouse's income, Reno said.

"If you are the higher earner in a couple, delaying benefits not only means a higher benefit for you for the rest of your life," she said. "It also means a higher benefit for your spouse if she or he outlives you in old age."

In more than half of couples who are 65 today, one spouse will live beyond 90, she said.

But residents of nonmetropolitan areas like Estill County may have a harder time delaying their retirement.

"In rural areas there is often a challenge as folks move toward retirement," said Deanna Sharpe, a personal finance professor at the University of Missouri. "They are more likely to face unemployment. Jobs are not as available. And when they are, they tend to pay less."

Economic downturns can also affect when people decide to start receiving Social Security, Sharpe said.

"One of the coping mechanisms during the recent recession was to pick up Social Security at age 62, even if they might not have planned to do that before the recession," she said.

Retirees need to make informed decisions, Sharpe said, but too often that doesn't happen.

"We find in surveys of financial literacy that quite a large portion of folks don't understand the basics," she said. "That's a concern."

But retirees can easily find free or low-cost advice. Sharpe said many USDA Extension Service offices can provide information on retirement planning. She also recommended nonprofit organizations such as the National Endowment for Financial Counseling and Financial Education (www.nefe.org).

The Social Security Administration website (ssa.gov) has a calculator that allows workers to estimate their retirement earnings based on their own work records and estimated retirement age.

And the National Academy of Social Insurance has materials online about the impact of delaying Social Security benefits (www.nasi.org/WhenToTakeSocialSecurity).

With national discussions about Social Security frequently in the news, some workers may worry whether the system will be there when they need it. Sharpe said people should stay abreast of the issues. "That's part of making an informed decision," she said.

But Reno said that should not influence a personal decision about when to draw benefits.

"Social Security will be there if you wait," she said. The system is fully financed for about the next two decades and is three-quarters financed thereafter, she said.

"Despite what you may hear, lawmakers have some good options to fix the system for the long haul," she said.

Every day is Father's Day

By Beverly Thompson
CV&T Guest Columnist

This may not start out like a father's day story but believe me, it is. My daddy always knew when I needed him and never did he let me down. He lives in my heart and there is never a day that goes by that I do not think of him.

For me every day is "Father's Day."

I stood in the darkest corner of our front porch where I could see across the street. Not daring to move, I tried to make myself as small as possible. It was February and it was icy cold outside but I could not leave my vantage point. The snow was pelting down and as soon as it hit my face it melted and streamed down my face to finally freeze again. If anyone had seen me in my dark corner they would have thought that I was crying. Even though I did not fully understand the meaning of the words "impending death," I somehow knew that I would be losing someone tonight that meant a lot to me.

My good friend was going to leave us forever and make the journey to finally be united with his family. Even though I did not exactly know what was happening I somehow realized that we would all be sad tomorrow. When my mother and other neighbors had been asked to come as quickly as possible, I knew something bad was happening at the Riddle house.

Judge Riddell was an elderly gentleman, but he was so friendly and never failed to smile and wave if he saw me. He had watched me ride his son-in-law's horse so often, and he had never failed to come outside to watch me ride by his house.

Mr. Riddell and Sam Tuttle were not only father in-law and son-in-law but they were the very best of friends. Now as I waited in the dark I remembered these happy times and feared that they were gone forever. I stood still and waited, not knowing exactly what I was waiting for, but still waiting. A cry rang out and in my little girl heart I knew that the inevitable had happened and that the waiting was over. The thing that I had feared had happened and our sweet neighbor and my friend had passed away.

Death leaves a mark on everyone but to a child it is a wound that never heals because of the lack of understanding. I was never to see my friend again and sadly I had to accept it. I heard our front door open and my daddy came to me, in the darkest corner of the porch where I thought that I was out of sight, and wrapped his arms around me. He must have known all along that I was hidden in the shadows, and he waited till our friend had passed to come to me and give me the comfort that I needed.

Somehow Daddy always knew when I needed him and somehow he always came to me.

There were a lot of people coming and going for the next few days. After the funeral the house was closed and another chapter of my childhood was closed.

No more waves and smiles from a kind and sweet gentleman. No more cookies and milk under their shade tree. No more stories of by-gone days from my friend that had lived for so many years. The war between the North and South lived in his memory and he sometimes imparted these stories to a little girl who was all ears when he opened his sweet mouth to tell me another story. Over the years, most of the stories are forgotten but the memory remains of my time with him and his quite and gentlevoice. He and his family framed our neighborhood with his vision and love of "Sweet Springs."

He named almost every street after a member of his family. He loved our neighborhood and wanted us all to remember him and his love for "Sweet Springs."

This was just another time when Daddy came to me and gave me the comfort that I needed. He always knew and he never failed me.

If you are blessed with a father that seems to always be there when you need him, then you will understand the love that I had and still have for the greatest love of my life, Ezart Ashcraft, my sweet daddy.

Do not waste any time; just jump up and give your daddy a big hug.

Cherish every thought and memory that you have of him and do not miss out on a chance to tell him how much you love him.

Happy Father's Day to all you lucky people who still have a father that you can kiss and hug and tell him of your love for him, and do not miss a chance to say. I love you, Daddy.

A bridge across Red River May 1914

The following from the Clay City Times shows the sentiment in the neighborhood adjacent to Clark County.

"One of the most progressive rural districts in Powell or Estill counties is that section of the country around the little village of Spout Springs, which embraces territory in both Estill and Powell counties. Isaac Hollon, right, with the Estill County Extension service accepts a $150 Jackson Energy Operation Round-Up grant check from Estill County director, Fred Brown, left. The grant funds will be used to help pay 4-H Camp fees for a local student.

'One Happy Camper' thanks to Jackson Energy

An Estill County student will be attending 4-H Camp this year, with some help from a Jackson Energy Operation Round-Up grant. Isaac Hollon, Estill County 4-H Extension Agent for 4-H Youth Development, accepted the check, which was presented by Fred Brown, Jackson Energy's Estill County director. Hollon said the grant funds will be used to offset the cost of the 4-H camp fee for a local student.

"Operation Round-Up is an easy way for co-op members to give a small amount each month to deserving individuals and organizations in their local communities, like 4-H camp," said Rodney Chrisman, Jackson Energy's Manager of Economic Development and Community Relations.Operation Round-Up works when co-op members voluntarily have their electric bill rounded to an even dollar amount. For example, if a bill was $222.62 and the member had volunteered to participate in Round-Up, it would automatically be rounded up to $223. The additional 38¢ would go directly into the Round-Up account. The average contribution over time is approximately 50¢ per month.

The donated funds go directly into a trust account that can only be used for grant funding. This account is administered by a seven-person Board of Trustees which meets quarterly to review grant applications. Any individual or community group with a worthwhile project can apply for funding.

More than $180,000 has been donated to area community service projects since Jackson Energy began this program in 2003. For more information on Operation Round-Up call 1 800-262-7480, or log on to Jackson Energy's web site, www.jacksonenergy.com. Jackson Energy is a Touchstone Energy Cooperative serving more than 51,000 homes and businesses in Southeastern Kentucky.

LIFESTYLES

Meet your farmers: Market opens for the summer

Karen Bicknell, and son John, pictured on the front page with the Browns, are new vendors at the Estill County market this year.

Dawson Lamb, left, chats with Michelle Sloan from Beattyville. Michelle is also a new vendor at the farmer's market this year, and Dawson is a regular at farmers' market every year.

The Farmer's Market is now open on Tuesdays and Fridays at the Estill County Fairground Pavilion.

Although garden produce is just beginning to come in, vendors have several items for sale.

On Friday, Hannah and Clay Eaton sold salad peas, as well as homemade lip balm, sunscreen lotion bars and homemade banana blueberry bread.

Karen and Jon Bicknell brought hoop-house ripened tomatoes to market, as well as summer squash, zucchini, cabbage and peas. This is Karen's first year at the Estill County market, but she said she has sold at Lexington and Richmond markets in the past.

Cheryl Fling, with non-profit Peaceful Paws Animal Rescue, and Erica Strong sell jewelry and other items to benefit the cat rescue organization.

Michelle Sloan, new to the Estill County farmer's market this year, lives near Beattyville. She sells fresh herbs and country eggs and makes homemade peanut brittle from homegrown peanuts, homemade breads, and jams and jellies.

Michelle is originally from Iowa. She met her husband while they were both in the Air Force, and after living in several states, they are currently settled in Kentucky.

Fred and Joy Brown, of Brown Farm Meats, have local-raised pork for sale each week, including bratwurst, tenderloin, bacon, pork roast, pork burgers and ham. Fred Brown has been raising hogs to sell at market for years, but last year, he began directly marketing meats from the pigs he raises.

Doug and Sondra Arvin, not present on Friday, sell a variety of fruits and vegetables at the market each year. They also have local honey, jams, jellies and homegrown cornmeal.

Kim Gill, alo not pictured, is president of the Estill County Farmer's Market. She sells homemade soaps, lotions, bug-off sprays, as well as home-baked goods and jams and jellies.

The Estill County Farmers' Market is open at the Estill County fairgrounds pavilion on Tuesdays, from 3 to 6 p.m., except for the second Tuesday of the month, senior day, when the hours are from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Fridays, the hours are always 8 a.m. to noon.
